

Hair for Hope Reaches Global Indian International School

In line with our efforts to spread the message of hope for children with cancer and continuously build a bigger community of support for them, every year we forge new partnerships with different stakeholders. This year, we are fortunate to partner with a new institution, Global Indian International School.

On 2 August 2010, 24 students from the Global Indian International School shaved to support children with cancer in their school premises. This satellite event is among the impressive 21 satellite events for Hair for Hope 2010.

With smiles on their faces, the students proudly displayed their shaved heads, a testament of their support. As Hair for Hope shavees, these students are now childhood cancer ambassadors, helping us raise awareness about this life-threatening illness among their immediate circle of influence and hopefully to the bigger community they belong in.

We welcome the efforts of Global Indian International School in doing their part for the children and families we support. We look forward to a continued partnership in years to come!
