

TODAY
we set you thinking

Monday, June 13, 2011 Weather 32 / 26 °C

Home Singapore Votes Singapore Voices Commentary Blogs World Science Sports Business TODAY Gallery Archives

Columns Entertainment Health Wine & Dine Travel Tech & Digital Style Design Cars Things To Do NYT - TODAY

Search Stories Log In Register LIVE RADIO

Home > Singapore > Shaving for a good cause

SHARE Print Email AA

Shaving for a good cause

by Leong Wai Kit
04:47 AM Jun 11, 2011

SINGAPORE - His hair had just grown back after 15 months of chemotherapy, but 14-year-old cancer survivor Jarenn insisted on having his hair shaved off for Hair for Hope (HfH), the annual affair which raises funds and offers moral support for children with cancer and their families.

"I'm here today because I want to show love and encourage my friends who are battling with cancer," said Jarenn, who was diagnosed with leukaemia at 12, and returned to school in March after 22 months of treatment.

The initiative, organised by the Children's Cancer Foundation (CCF), hopes to see 3,000 volunteers coming forward between now and August, and raise S$1.8 million through donation pledge cards to individuals who shed their locks.

Since it started in 1996, it has helped more than 1,980 families.

CCF chairperson Dr Tay Miah Hiang said: "Generally, medical treatment cost is rising due to more expensive research and cost of medication. A bone marrow transplant (for leukaemia treatment) can be as costly as S$150,000 per patient. This excludes the cost of the long-term follow-up and medication to prevent rejection."

Apart from providing financial aid, CCF also helps children with cancer reintegrate back into school by preparing their teachers and school-mates.

HfH's main events will be held at VivoCity on July 23 and July 24.
LEONG WAI KIT

Like 62 4 9Share

Dr Alvin Wong
SKN (Centrepoint & Parkway Parade) Medical Hair Loss Treatment
www.sk-n.com.sg/Call_6732-7658

AdChoices

TALKBACK

No responses currently.

LEAVE A COMMENT

Irrelevant or inappropriate comments might be edited or removed.
Please note that your comments might be used in the print edition of TODAY.

Name

Email Address

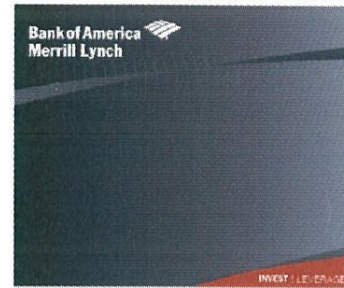

Comments

0 character

Enter The Code On The Right If the code is unclear, click on it to get a new one. The code is case-sensitive. Don't leave spaces between the characters.

enlarge this photo
Ms Isabel Fhuá, 20, was the first female to get her head shaved for Hair for Hope. Photo by SYAFIQAH HANIB.

OTHER SINGAPORE HEADLINES

- It's human traffic, not the new system
- Who will look after our elderly?
- HDB wants more contractors to help ease the squeeze
- Before the expectations bubble bursts ...
- Rooting out resume lies
- Your cotton T-shirts may soon cost more
- When MacRitchie lay dry and parched
- Industry association wants used car transfer fee scrapped
- UniSIM and Business China offer five Chinese-related scholarships
- Race to the top
- Women on board
- A rock on his shoulders
- The boy that dance chose
- Panel to review flood measures
- MOH to review nursing homes

Today's PDF Print Edition

VIDEOS OF THE DAY